Treason is a word which has come back into the vocabulary since the war.

Bravo, Senate! You fairly matched the House. The nation stands together.

The policy of attrition is getting in some deadly work on the western war front now.

The get-together between Wilson and Roosevelt is one of the best signs of the American times.

By firing on the U. S. destroyer Smith the Germans aroused the ire of a considerable American family.

The second-class license application will be unpopular this year, but the seventh-class is likely to have quite a vogue inasmuch as it permits the bottled sale of beer and light wines.

The bombing of a few German towns like Freiburg is likely to give the German people a new conception of the numerous air raids on English towns ever since the war started. At least they can get a taste of the suffering and loss inflicted by the German military monster.

THE U-BOAT MENACE IN AMERICAN WATERS.

The discovery of a German submarine on the North American side of the Atlantic ocean undoubtedly means that Germany was deliberately lying when the statement was made that the Berlin government did not intend to declare war on the United States. The Berlin government was merely playing for time in which to get prepared for an active campaign against the United States before making the perfunctory declaration. Germany had no effective weapons ready with which to make one of those sharp thrusts for which that military autocracy has become famous, or, perhaps better stated, the United States was so far removed from the immediate range of those available weapons that the Berlin government delayed the appearance of war-like attitude until those weapons could be brought nearer the objective. To help along the deception, the word was allowed to go forth that Germany did not intend to declare war on the United States despite the belligerent attitude of the latter government. Meanwhile the German admiralty was sending U-boats across the Atlantic or drawing them from some convenient base in a friendly port and placing them in waters contiguous to the great American seaports. The U-boat seen by the U. S. destroyer Smith on Tuesday morning, April 17, was undoubtedly one of a considerable fleet of such vessels ordered to attempt a virtual blockade of the Atlantic coast; and the shot which the U-boat fired at the Smith was, in fact, Germany's formal declaration of war against the United States. Nevertheless, the U-boats will find that the American naval authorities were not deluded by the pacific little assertion that was allowed to seep out of Germany and that the Atlantic coast line is as well defended as it was possible to make it in the time following the act of Congress in declaring a state of war. Moreover, those efforts are being continued at top speed. The United States should be able to protect its shipping from the submarines that Germany can spare from the work across the ocean.

TALK OF THE TOWN

Miss Grace Carson of Ayers street, who spent the winter in Florence Villa, Fla., has returned to Barre.

Although no concerted action has been taken by persons who are usually foremost in the clean-up movement, it is probable that two days in May will be set aside for a municipal house cleaning and to the end that refuse may be removed as rapidly as it is collected, the city council has decided to use its street department auto truck for the work.
